In this figure, the horizontal axis represents the training set sizes, and the vertical axis represents the test error, test precision, test recall, and test F1 score respectively. The blue scatter points represent the actual performance estimations. The blue dashed line shows the fitting of the POW3 learning curve, while the red solid line represents the fitting of the our learning curve.